If you've ever had chickenpox, you can now get Shingles.

The same virus that causes chickenpox stays in your body and can later resurface as Shingles—a painful, blistering rash.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends FDA-approved ZOSTAVAX®, a vaccine that can help prevent Shingles in adults 60 years of age and older.

Only your doctor can decide if ZOSTAVAX® is right for you. ZOSTAVAX® cannot be used to treat Shingles, or the nerve pain that may follow Shingles, once you have it.

To schedule an appointment to receive your ZOSTAVAX® vaccine, call DMH PrimeTime at 217-876-2191.
